They tous the new hay in the meadow, They gather the elder bloom white; They find where the dusky graps purple In the seft-tinted October light. They know where the apples hang ripest,

And are sweeter than Italy wines; They know where the fruit hangs the thickest On the long, thorny blackberry vines. They gather the delicate sea-weeds; And build tiny castles of sand;

They pick up the beautiful sea shells,— Fairy barks that have drifted to land. They wave from the tall, rocking tree-tops Where the oriole's hammock nest swings, And at night-time are folded in slumber

By a song that a fond mother sings. Those who toll bravely are strongest; The humble and poor become great; And from these brown-handed children

Since James Rogers, the builder of the clock, nut its wheels in motion, it has never Ropted for any lengthened time before. In 1846 the clock was put in position, and connected with the chimes. Regers then had lis office at 100. Recadway, and still continues in the business at 102 Fulton street. He has built since the great clock at the Vandacbilt or Grand Central depot, and several other great clocks, but the one in Trinity is his tral depot, and several other great clocks, but the one in Trinity is his master-piece, and with one exception (not the Straturg figure clock), is the largest dial-working clock in the world. The dials are ten feet in diameter, each hour being cut in relief from a single block of stone. The hour hands are four feet in length, and the minute hands about five feet four inches. The clock is forty feet shows the dials, and the movements acrawled with great exertion the name above the dials, and the movements scrawled with great exertion the name of the hands work through long tin of Lorenzo Smith upon the register. tubes encased in oak. The clock was placed so far above the diais because the bells are hung just behind the clock bands, and the churchmen feared that if the bells were telled by hand they might turn over and throw the ringers in contact with the clock-genr.

Under the bells is the station of the mysterious man who rings the changes on the bells. A rough wooden seat faces a frame-work from which project nine long wooden handles. They are Heyers fastened to thin lines connecting with the tongues of the bells.

Beside the octave is the "baby" bells.

Struck with any other bell, the tone of the "baby" raises the sound one and gaze not with joyous, but with octavo. Mr. Ayliff, the master of the contented eyes, upon the beautiful bells, will be at his station when the world around thee!
